Homecoming

Everyone says that you know who your true friends are after you graduate college. What if you know who they are when you graduate high school? Shouldn't it be obvious? I still have the same friends I had in high school, and we're even closer. Then again, I guess when you all grew a tail suddenly you would have to stay friendsâ€¦anyway!

So much has happened since we graduated. My father remarried when I was in my senior year of high school. His new wife (my new step-mom) is from America. Her name is Katherine (Katie). She's quite a bit younger than my father, but that's alright. She's really nice! They now have two daughters together, Krista and Delaney. Krista was born when I was eighteen and Delaney was born when I was twenty. They are so adorable. I have recently learned that they also adopted a sixteen-year-old boy from America. His name is Eric.

Emma and Ash are still together. They both go to school in England. Emma is earning her teaching license and Ash is studying business management. They are engaged and plan to get married after they are out of college.

Cleo and Lewis are still together as well. They stayed here in Australia for school. Cleo is studying fashion and Lewis is studying marine biology. Although they are not yet engaged we all know they'll end up getting married someday. They're destined for eachother.

As for Zane and me, we decided to go to school in America. They had more schools for us to chose from and better opportunities. We attend Brown University. Zane is studying business and I am studying English. We are now 23 and married. We have been married for six months, and are madly in love.

Moving to the Gold Coast was one of the best things that happened to me, and I really miss is. That is why I have to go back. Normally I would stay in America over summer break, but I can't anymore. I really miss my family and friends, and Zane agrees. It's going to be difficult to see everyone and then leave again for my last year of school, but I really need to see them. When all of us get together though, God only knows what will happen.
